

Students Wanted for Social Psychology Research Lab

Dr. Arleigh Reichl is looking for students interested in being part of a research lab investigating the effects of subtle sexism in advertisements, along with other social psychology topics.

What's involved: Lab members will attend lab meetings every 3-4 weeks to discuss new and ongoing projects. Other activities may include reading research articles, conducting literature searches/reviews, data collection, data entry/analysis, and preparing presentations.

Benefits to students: Possible benefits include valuable experience with all aspects of research, a letter of reference, and even authorship on conference presentations and publications (all of which contribute to a strong resume' or application).

Payment: Students are being asked to participate in the lab as volunteers. Limited funds are available to pay active lab members for such activities as data collection, data entry/analysis, and literature reviews.

To join: Please email Dr. Reichl (arleigh.reichl@kwantlen.ca) with your available times.
